

How Elle got her life back on track thanks to Jancett Day Nursery.

Elle was just aged 14 when she was asked to leave school. "I wasn't turning up to lessons and felt resentful at being made to attend school. Looking back, I realise that I didn't behave particularly well, but at the time it seemed impossible to do anything else."

Luckily for Elle, now 18, she was introduced to both a good training provider in Jace Training, and a supportive prospective employer at Jancett Day Nursery.

Elle continues:

"I'd known for years that I wanted to work in Child Care so all of a sudden I'd gone from potential failure to a possible new career."

Realising that she wouldn't get anywhere without working, Elle knuckled down and achieved a Level 1 on the Entry to Employment Course. She was then offered the opportunity of an Apprenticeship at Jancett Day Nursery and couldn't wait to take it up.

Made the right choice

"I love my job and really enjoy working with the children. Doing activities with them and seeing them develop is great. I know I've made the right choice."

New outlook on life

"The great thing is that my Apprenticeship has given me a new outlook on life and on what I'm really capable of. For me, school wasn't the answer, but learning through working definitely is."
